WEBWATCHERKIDS.COM PARENTAL MONITORING SOFTWARE FEATURED ON CBS NEWS IN ATLANTA

Company's #1 Rated Parental Monitoring Software Becomes Featured Product For Parents Looking to Protect Their Children From Online Predators

Atlanta, GA – September 19, 2006 – WebWatcherKids, an industry leader in parental monitoring software designed to protect children from online predators was the leading story featured during CBS 46/Atlanta's recent newscast outlining the product's superior features in protecting children online. As reported by Rebekka Schramm of CBS/46, "...blocking may not be enough these days because kids can just about always find a way around that block".

WebWatcherKids' product, WebWatcher Parental Monitoring Software, helps parents invisibly monitor the safety of their children by allowing them to see every website visited or keystroke input on the host computer from any other computer in world with an internet connection—even wirelessly. It's the only software on the market capable of delivering this important web-based feature, in addition to providing screen shots of every web site visited, plus every email message, chat and instant message either sent or received.

According to Michelle Veni of suburban Dacula, who has installed the software to help protect her five year old son, "It's not about catching your children doing something bad; you're protecting them because they're naïve and may not fully understand."
